

BIOSPHERE RESERVES. HUBS FOR STAKEHOLDER ENGAGEMENT!

ENVIRONMENTAL STAKEHOLDERS

Companies, not-for-profit organisations and citizens committed to taking concrete actions to sustainably develop their activities are encouraged by biosphere reserves and recognised as environmental stakeholders. They join a network where they can share best practices and meet other professionals from the area, and sometimes unprecedented partnerships and even a few new friendships are born!

More than simply representatives of their local economy, environmental stakeholders are like ambassadors for biosphere reserves.

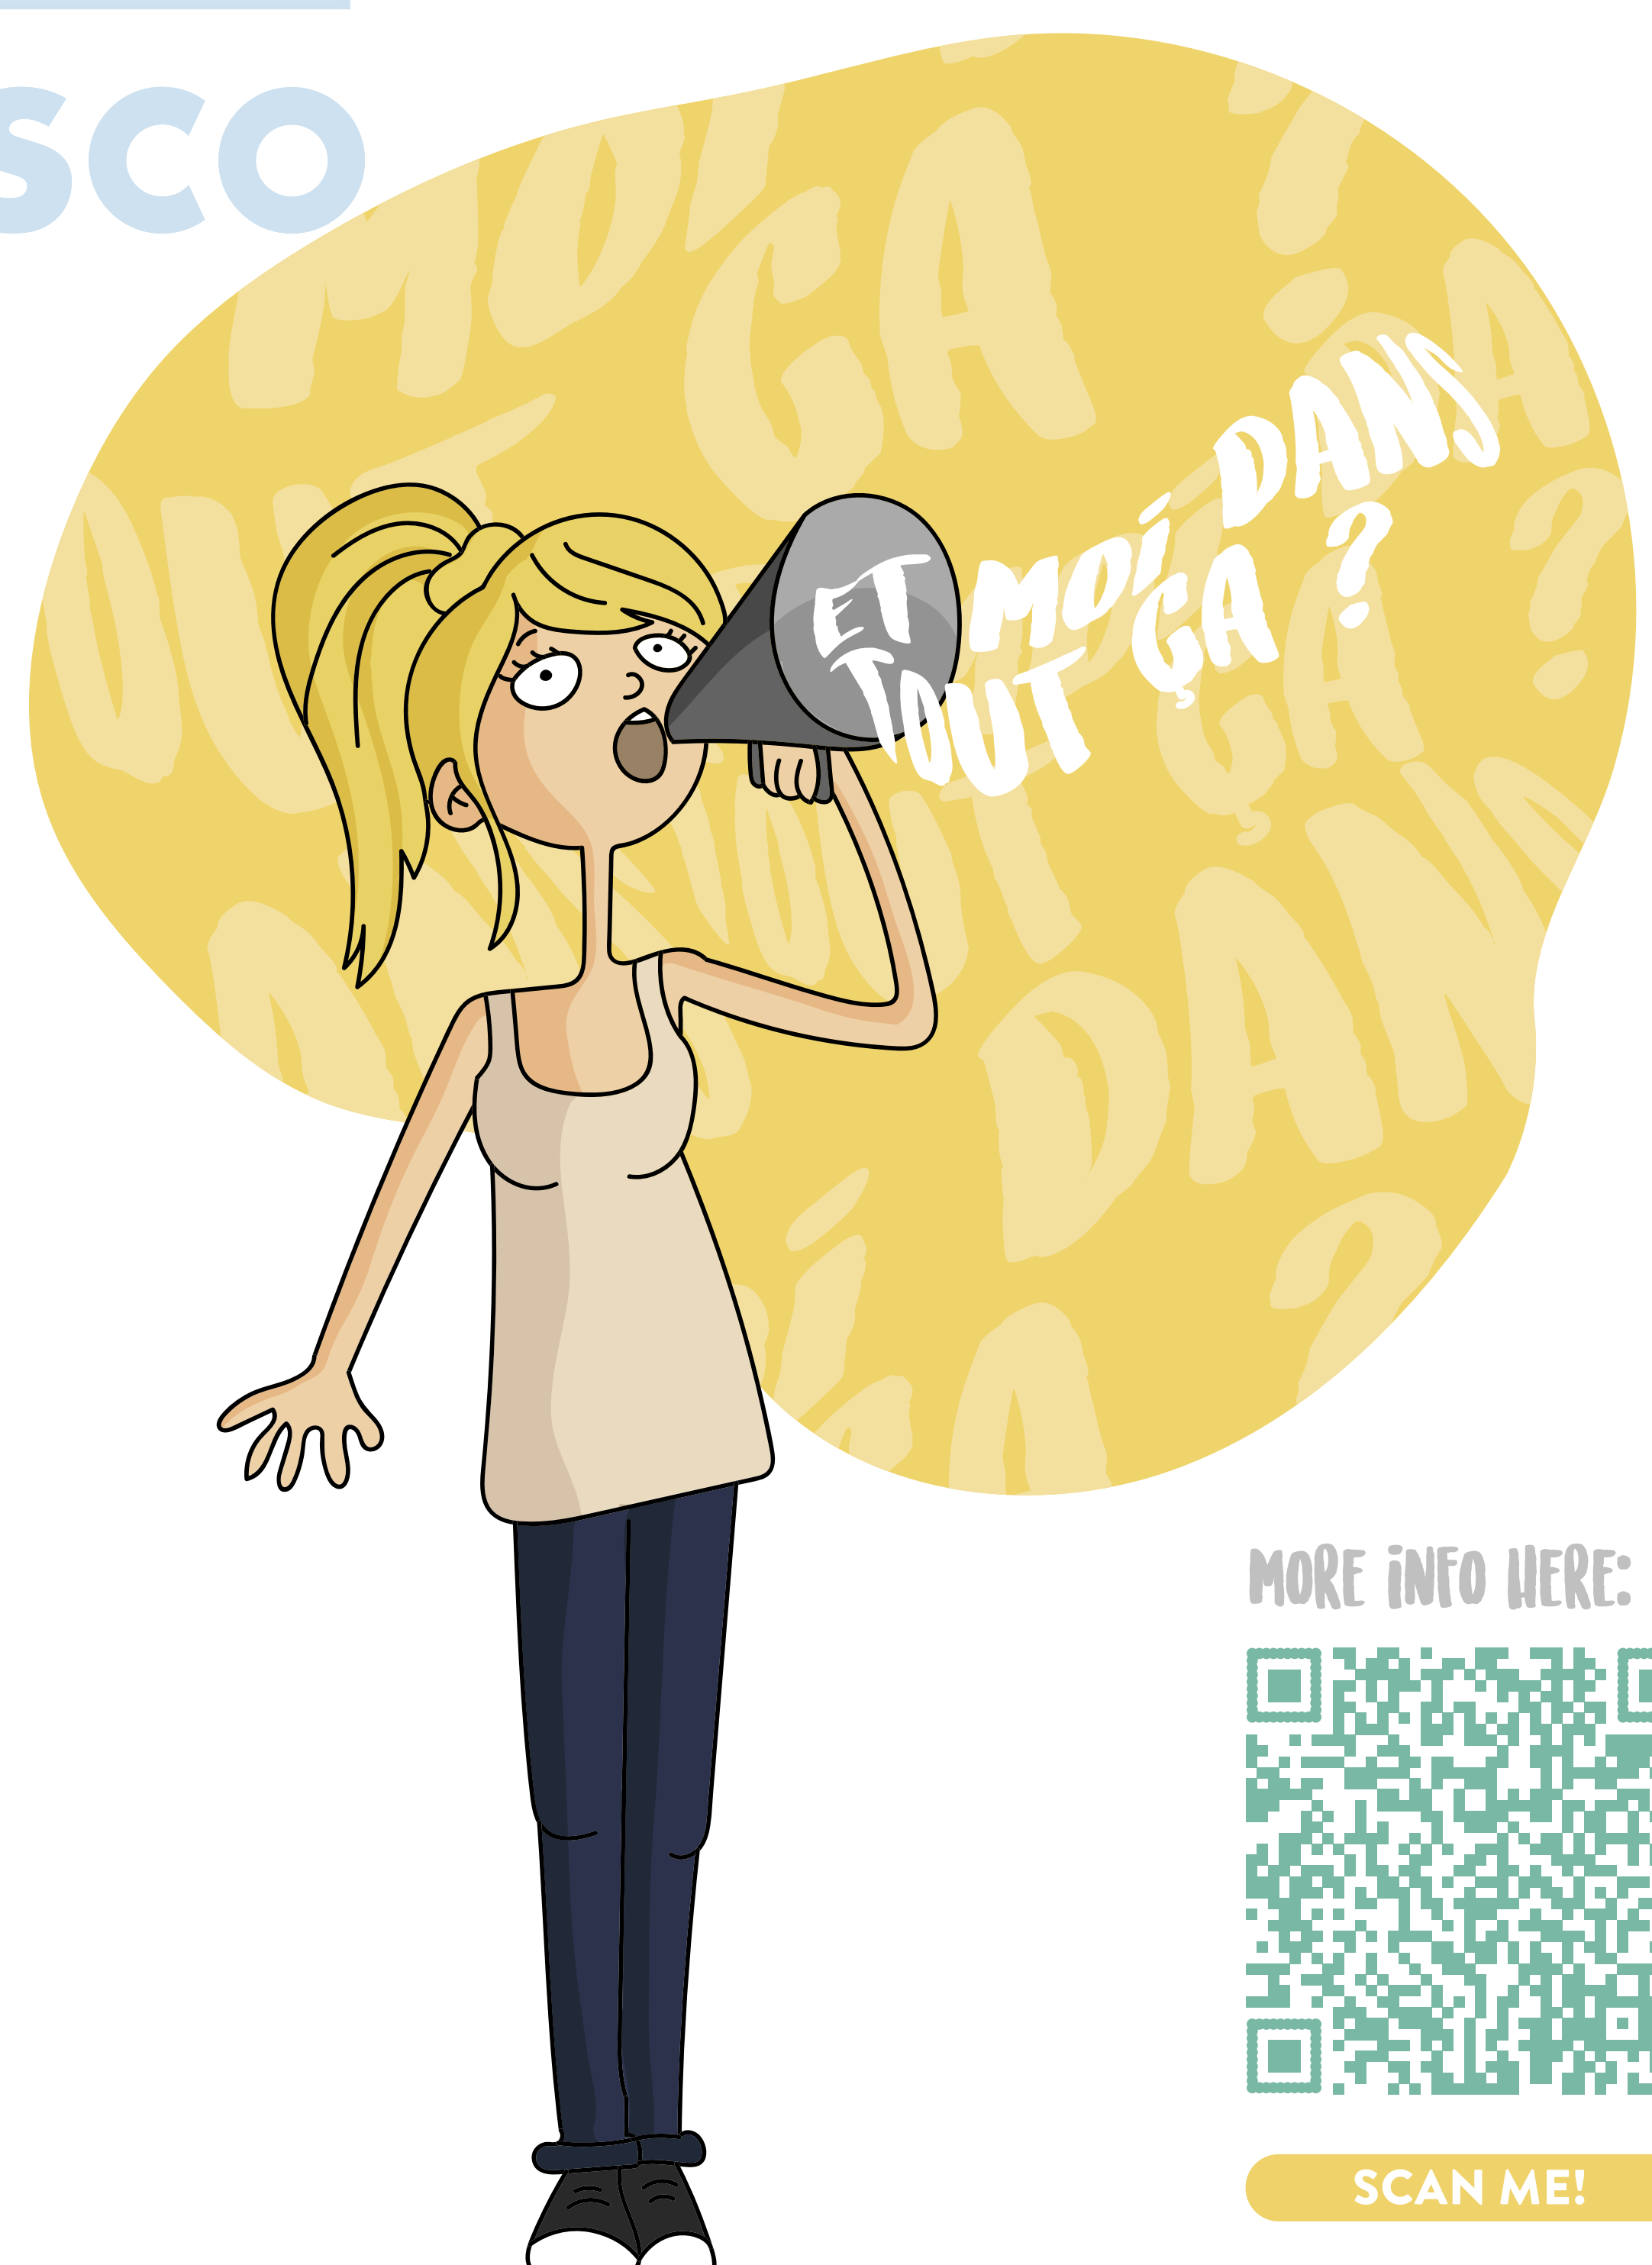

CO'MAB NOT-FOR-PROFIT

In France, Co'MAB is a not-for-profit organisation for young people involved in biosphere reserves. Thanks to a strong partnership with MAB France and its network, events are held specifically for young adults (aged 18-35) residing in and socio-economic stakeholders of biosphere reserves, who are the most affected by environmental problems but are often left out of the public participation and decision-making process.

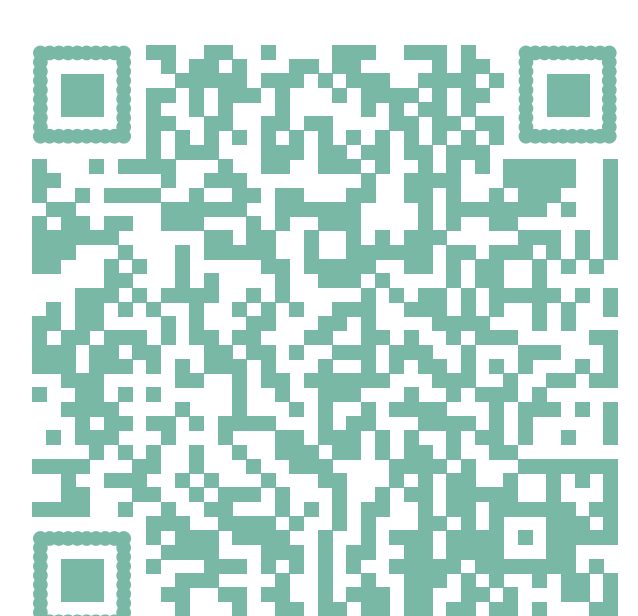

Co'MAB facilitates youth forums that aim to familiarise them with the MAB programme and encourage them to get involved in sustainable development projects in their area. They thus foster intergenerational dialogue.

BIOSPHERE RESERVE TROPHIES

This year, the Biosphere Reserve Trophies will go to original sustainable development initiatives that promote biodiversity, tackle climate change and more generally advance the ecological transition. Companies, not-for-profit organisations and citizens alike can participate in this competition. In addition to financial support, winners will receive guidance from the biosphere reserve and meet at a ceremony at Unesco, thus facilitating networking and discussions that may also lead to new partnerships.

MORE INFO HERE:

SCAN ME!